

Chris Troutner <chris.troutner@gmail.com>

Water Contractors

Christian Dahl <n490af@gmail.com>

Thu, Apr 13, 2017 at 9:35 PM

To: chris.troutner@gmail.com

Chris,
I have heard of them from Bob, so it would be worth trying them. I was short on time last week, but it is still worth digging further near the standpipe to see what is there to hook up to. It should be a 4 inch PVC pipe. Most of the time they will want to have the area and route to your site excavated ahead of time.
Christian

Sent from my iPad

> On Apr 12, 2017, at 6:16 PM, Chris Troutner <chris.troutner@gmail.com> wrote:

>

> Hi Christian,

>

> I've been trying to follow the HOA requirements in order to get water hooked up to my lot, and I'm having a heck of a time. Of the three contractors that are approved to hook up water meters, Lance is no longer around and Bob Egan is no longer available. That leaves only George.

>

> I just got off the phone with Buddy Wright, Bob's partner. They are both looking to stop doing outer-island work. However, Buddy did recommend Island Excavating. He said they have the hot-tapping tool required to hook a meter up to a live system, and they have their own boat to come out to the non-ferry serviced islands.

>

> Is there any issue if I call and ask them to perform the hookup?

>

> -Chris Troutner